

Nonstop printing:

One day at lunch at work. Ben had been waiting for his files to come out of the printer. Hour after hour he stood but they were doing nothing. Soon it became dark and Ben was still waiting for his files and then suddenly they started coming out of the printer one after another nonstop. He tried to stop the printer but it was out of control. The next day Ben was still there but he was buried in more than 1 billion papers. Ben was still trying to stop the printer. Ben lost his glasses in all that paper and he was swimming along in the papers trying to find his glasses. All he could see was black and white blurs. He had more than ten paper cuts on each hand. He was swimming along then Bang! his head hit something hard, He didn't know what it was, so he waved and he touched something so he grabbed it. It was the printer he couldn't lift it but he still saw it then the printer suddenly stopped printing paper but still he had so many paper cuts and lost so much blood that he died. We wish you a happy time in heaven Ben.
